RANDIE SNOW

ARTIST BIO

Randie Snow has worked as a full-time graphic designer/art director in Pittsburgh for over a decade, but it wasn't until she met James Church in the summer of 2003 that she was introduced to assemblage art and discovered her true passion in life.

Snow creates by refining ideas she pulls from the cacophony of modern life. Being drawn to seemingly innocuous, mundane objects with no apparent meaning, she eventually finds a voice and a story within each of these new "friends." She then finds herself acting more like a medium than an artist... channeling the voices and the collective energy from the unrelated objects and filtering them through her own, until their dissonance becomes harmony and their individual, disparate stories meld into one.

In 2008, and only a short time of creating as a fine artist, Snow's second solo show "Passages" opened successfully at Moxie Dada in 2008, and she also won Best of Show at the Pittsburgh Technology Council's 15-Minutes Gallery, for her piece titled "Flight of the Imagination". Recently, she was one of 250 artists selected to participate in Fe Arts Gallery's show titled, "In the Making: 250 Years/250 Artists," where she was also included in the show's catalog.

When she isn't working her day job, you can either find her in the studio, or gallery-hopping with friends. Snow is also an active member of Group A and the Associated Artists of Pittsburgh.

"I thought I knew the type of assemblages I would see at "Passages" at Moxie Dada. I had no idea that Snow has ascended to a new level in her output. She has produced an extremely moving body of pieces based on the seven sins and seven virtues of Catholic faith. They are quite remarkable, and you can (and should) see them through May."

"FLIGHT OF THE IMAGINATION"

"Snow's assemblage pieces are compiled of found objects that emotionally contrast symbols of birth and death. In pieces like 'Barren,' 'Meatface,' and 'Peep Show,' she explores femininity, innocence, and the loss thereof in three dimensions. Items such as antique ceramic dolls, glass, gems, and vibrantly colored "wallpaper" are recurrent in her narratives."
